Keynote Speakers

William M. Flynn, new Chairman of the New York State Public Service Commission and former President of NYSEERDA, will supervise the energy production and delivery service industry, and has a lead role in overseeing the development of a variety of energy sources. At NYSEERDA he managed programs to develop and install energy efficient measures and renewable energy technologies throughout the state. His leadership in these two capacities make him a most appropriate keynoter for the conference.

Steven J. Strong, nationally renowned solar design architect and TIME Magazine "Hero of the Planet", has earned an international reputation for his pioneering designs of energy-autonomous buildings and engineering and integration of the renewable energy systems to power them. Mr. Strong was invited back to The White House when the National Park Service recently retained his firm, Solar Design Associates, to design and install three solar energy systems at the Presidential compound. He is one of the world's most respected solar designers and an industry pioneer.

Walter Simpson is the Energy Officer for the State University at Buffalo. A former member of the Erie County EMC, he has organized and conducted workshops and conferences on "green design" and energy conservation. He has been recognized for providing leadership to a nationally recognized campus energy program which has saved millions of dollars through energy conservation, which is now the largest purchaser of wind-power in New York State.
